Wood Construction United for the Future

A dynamic driver for over a decade, wood construction in France currently faces a questioning of its very foundations. The market of individual houses, which constituted its base, is in decline. Public procurement, which shouldered it and provided an opportunity for it to prove its worth through large-scale structures such as school complexes, have become scarce. Coupled with an inevitable shift towards the digital model, the emerging forms of concept-implementation represent nothing less than a great challenge. Companies are fighting tooth and nail to preserve, at all costs, an expertise just recently reconstituted with the help of unprecedented training efforts. After the decline of furniture and woodworking, wood construction was yet, and remains still, the great hope of the entire industry. Once again, the FBC will meaningfully illustrate how the choice of wood reconciles the economic, environmental, and societal demands of our times. Using renewable, local resources in short cycles; generating employment, added value, sustainable development, and also modern quality architecture – such is the work of the participants who present at the Forum, cutting-edge achievements in terms of constructive solutions. This requirement, this dynamic, must continue in the face of any and all obstacles for the sake of future generations. Taking up residence for its fifth edition at the new Centre Prouvé of Nancy, the FBC provides a framework commensurate with the issues at stake and will allow market players to address, in ideal conditions, the urgent questions of today. In keeping with its formula of themed seminars alternated with plenary sessions and convivial meetings in the exposition space, the 2015 edition reflects the efforts undertaken in technical equipment (CLT), performance (high-rise, energy-efficiency) and short-cycle (local wood, French hardwoods). The program, centered on the presentation of latest achievements, is directed at all professionals working in wood construction, in particular project managers as well as contractors. Participants immediately receive the Acts of the Forum in order to make informed choices about the seminars they wish to attend, to inquire about the availability of technical solutions with suppliers, to develop projects with the numerous specialized spokespersons who are also present, and to then act in their proper trade with a clear vision of the opportunities available.

Jean-Claude Bignon

In line with Roland Schweitzer, honoured at the previous edition of the Forum, Jean-Claude Bignon has contributed, in teaching, research, and architecture, to a recognition of the necessary culture dimension in the implementation of wood materials. Architect DPLG and HDR in architecture sciences, professor emeritus at l'Ecole Nationale Supérieure d'Architecture of Nancy where he was Chairman of the Board of Directors, Jean-Claude Bignon has been, since the 80s, the initiative of a number of actions in the realms of training and research that have contributed to a revival of wood construction in Lorraine and France. Having been heavily involved in the establishment of largely "wood"-oriented DEA, DESS, Master and doctorate degrees, he fostered the development of a "wood" sensibility and competence for many young architects and engineers. Through his pedagogic actions and research within l'Ecole Nationale supérieure d'Architecture of Nancy and the ENSTIB, he took part in the creation of a whole economic sector of wood in the Lorraine region.

Tribute: Pascal Triboulot, director of ENSTIB, FR-Epinal

Claude Weisrock

A fourth-generation wood construction worker, Claude Weisrock, master carpenter (compagnon du devoir), directed the enterprise until 2000, the year in which it became a subsidiary of the Haas group. It was in 1963 that, in addition to traditional business, a modern production of laminated timber was implemented at Saulcy/Meurthe, of which the buildings rose from an initial height of 17'000 m²/year to more than 400'000 m² in 2000. This accomplishment was possible only with a strong team spirit, master carpenters, skilled workers, and engineers, all highly talented, committed to the profession and in relentless technological surveillance. The reputed economic model of this team is based on its communication and collaboration with, on one hand, the artisans and carpentry companies, and even more so, on the other hand, with the architects who have trusted them with the completion of exceptional buildings in Europe, Africa, and Asia which serve as reference points for wood construction. Claude Weisrock shaped a whole generation of current leaders in the wood sector.

- 19.20 Aperitif in the exposition space sponsored by TECHNIWOOD society

Man, Architecture,
Wood Course
April 13 – 17, 2015

In partnership with the Wood Construction Forum, l'Ecole Supérieure d'Architecture of Nancy, Classe 4 and ALFA – professional education organizations – offer three days of courses as a prelude to the Forum. Students and professionals will assemble around wood construction in conferences, seminars, and study trips to collectively address its history, evolution, techniques, and particularities. Two orientations – for professionals and students – are offered, with communal sessions to debate and learn about the relationship between man, architecture, and wood.
